“ In 2000, I began working at Physical Therapy for Westmoreland Hospital. This is where I met Debbie. What I didn't know is this amazing woman would become one of my dearest friends. In 2004, my mother passed away. Debbie asked me to give her some of my mom's favorite pieces of clothing. From my mom's clothes, Debbie sewed teddy bears that I distributed to my family members. This kind gesture to this day is a cherished memory for myself and my family. Debbie and I shared a job at therapy. When we encountered a problem, she always came up with a solution. She was the most common sensed person I knew. We traveled to New City with my cousin's Girl Scout Troop. They had some unfilled seats on their tour bus. Deb and I did not tour with the Scout Troop. We visited a museum that was showing the 911 Tribute Quilt. Each square on the quilt paid tribute to each person who died on 911. I received my first of many quilts from Debbie when I turned 50. On my quilt she sewed "fabulous at 50." I also received 2 Christmas quilts from Debbie that just take my breath away. I left the therapy department in 2011 but Debbie and I remained friends. Debbie taught me how to sew curtains for my home. Those drapes hang in my home to this day. The memories of my dear friend are everywhere in my home but most importantly in my heart. Debbie lived life with no regrets. She was always looking forward to time with her grandchildren, attending one of their sporting events, traveling with Andy, or just spending the day in her sewing room creating a quilt. I often thought quilting pattern ideas came to Deb while she slept. She has been such a wonderful part of my life. I will miss this beautiful, funny, creative, and caring friend forever. My deepest sympathy to Debbie's family.

“ My heart is broken! Debbie was such a kind and giving person. In addition, her quilting creativity was fabulous! Debbie quilted many quilts for me and they were always perfect. The last quilt I picked up a few weeks ago was for my granddaughter. We visited and Debbie showed me the many quilts she was working on. She was excited about a “big foot” quilt for her son. The time before that she showed me the two fabulous quilts she had designed and quilted and was gifting to her two surgeons. I will miss you and the times we spent together. I hope you have joined a heavenly quilting group. ❤️ .
Condolences to your family whom you loved with all your heart!
