“ It leaves me with such a heavy heart to know that "big jim" is no longer of this mortal plane. He was a genuine, good hearted man who was known by all to have the determination and to know meaning of a hard days work, to help those who needed a leg up when they were down on their luck, and there to offer a silly joke or wisecrack to anyone who was lucky enough to hear it. Most of all, Jim was a family man. He loved his family with such intensity, that it was the fire that drove him to work harder and strive to give them a good life. His grandchildrens eyes lit up when they even heard his voice, and his children owe much of their success to him for being such a positive example. My deepest condolences go out to his wife. Her world began and ended with this wonderful man, and has shared a most wonderful life with not only her partner but her best friend. His family in turn loved him with such intensity that my heart aches for their incredible loss. May you find your strength within eachother to make it through this tragedy. I know that the big guy would have wanted it that way.
