“ I remember John fondly, finding him to have had a big heart and a sense of humor, both of which matched his physical stature. John shared stories with me that helped fill in parts of the Rosendahl legacy. One of my favorites was Grampa Rosendahl saving the “black church” after it burned down. He described Irwin when the two stores, Appliance and Jewelry, were young businesses. Small tales like that have given me an image of Irwin when the Rosendahl kids were young, about the time my own mother was growing up. Full of anecdotes, John always displayed love, warmth, and pride in the Rosendahls of all generations. I liked the fact that he always called me “Tommy.” I cherish those shared memories as a fundamental part knowing my cousin John.
